

Data Processors

To support our AwesomeAds offering, we use third party processors to process personal data on our behalf. We evaluate the privacy, security and confidential practices of these processors and enter into necessary agreements required to meet our obligations under various data privacy laws. Below you can find information about those processors, the purpose of processing and their privacy policy.

Last updated: 20 April 2020

Primary	Purpose	Privacy Policy
Amazon Web Services EMEA SARL	Storage of AwesomeAds data	AWSP
Google Analytics	Platform analytics on events generated from user actions in our product	MPP
Confluence, by Atlassian Corporation PLC	Collaboration tool/Internal knowledge share tool	CPP
JIRA, by Atlassian Corporation Plc.	Management of requests received from AwesomeAds Customers as part of the AwesomeAds Customer support services	JPP
MLab	Secondary data store for generated reports and storing programmatic approvals	MLPP
Oracle's Moat analytics SDK	Measuring the performance of, and verifying the delivery of advertisements	MPP
Slack Technologies, Inc.	Automated internal notification system for communications between AwesomeAds Customers and SuperAwesome	SPP

The Rocket Science Group LLC d/b/a, Mandrill	Providing email communication between AwesomeAds Customers and SuperAwesome for the purposes of managing account activity	MPP
---	---	------------